The Garden Notebook

This notebook records the first year of the garden behind the old school. Each page combines a short note with a picture taken on the same day.

In March the soil was still cold, but the first green shoots appeared along the southern wall. We planted beans, peas and two rows of carrots.

By June the beans had climbed the fence and the carrots were ready to thin. The children counted forty-seven ladybirds on a single afternoon.

Autumn

The harvest was smaller than hoped, but nobody minded. We kept the best seeds in paper envelopes, labelled them carefully and stored them in the cupboard for next year.
